Washington, 50,000 Bales; California 60,000 Bales, and Oregon, 70,000 Bales.

Speaking of the hop situation, Captain George Pope, of Portland, says: "The situation of Oregon's hop crop this year is a peculiar one. Four weeks ago the most conservative grower nearly 100,000 bales would be produced in this state. The hops were on the vines, and no doubt the quality would have been excellent but for the prices continues. heavy rains in August, which imparted new life to vines, and fresh strobiles began to set on laterals that could not have come to maturity at so late a date. In addition to this, the core of the burr grew continuously under conditions produced by the August rains and the warm weather of this month, so that growers were confronted by a problem that puzzled them. Kilns in 18 hours could not this year be against 11,177,483 bushels last year, taken off in less than 24 to 26 hours, and in some cases even 30 hours were required to take off a flooring of moderate size. This threw the drying machinery out of shape. The hops, owing to the cool weather of August were backward. Picking of them did not become general until about September 10, so that all large yards have suffered considerably. Entire yards have been abandoned on account of the rapid spread of mold, with the result that the crop has been cut down to about 70,000 bales. The quality of these 70,-000 bales will range about 10,000 and the remainder indifferent. "From what is known of other states California has the best quality, and 60,000 bales is said to be the yield in that state. Washington's quality is said to be the same as ours, but as that state is seven or eight days later in maturing the crop west of the Cascades, it is doubtful if it will harvest the quota accredited to her-50,000 bales. New York has one-third less this year than last, and the crop is said to have come down in very poor shape. English advices are conflicting. The yield in England is said to be the heaviest in many years. One writer who is an authority, while very conservative, gives the yield as 1,100 pounds per acre. England this year has 50,000 acres of hops. Such a yield, therefore, if it is all gathered will be nearly equal to British con sumption. Germany's crop is also above the average, but it is doubtful if she has many hops to throw on the export market. The market value of English hops today ranges from £2 15s to £4 10s per 112 pounds, but it is said that even these prices will not be maintained after the surplus of the United States seeks an outlet. As to this, however, there is no assurance.

bales choice, 80,000 to 40,000 medium,

'The points in favor of the grower are these: First, the old stocks have all been worked off, and the crop of the world goes to a practically bare market; second, times all the world over are better, confidence has been restored, labor is everywhere fully employed, and hence the consumption of beer is on the increase."

Seattle Starch Factory.

At the meeting of the Seattle chamber of commerce at Seattle last week that committee reported in favor of aiding in raising $25,000 for the establishment of a starch factory there. The proposed factory is to be built under the supervision of Mr. Hundhausen, of Westfalen, Germany whose family owns a secret process of making starch that has been in use for 30 years. The process saves all the gluten from the flour, while the process now in use on the coast, saves little or none of the gluten. The estimated cost of building and running the factory is $27,924. It is estimated that a factory at that point could sell in round numbers oneeighth of all the starch used on the coast, or per annum 600,000 pounds. This is an average of one ton per day and would require 1.33 tons of flour per day.

To Have a Regular Steamship Line. The Alaska Packers Association is making preparations to establish a regular steamship line running between San Francisco and Bristol bay next summer. The company has several canneries located on Bristol bay which are operated during the summer, but there has been no mail or passenger service from that place. The men engaged in fishing there are shut out from the world while the season lasts. The association has recently let a contract with a Portland firm for the building of a steamer whch will cost $200,000.

Atlin Needs More Courts. A petition is being circulated in Atlin asking for the appointment of a county court judge for that district. The need of such a court is imperative. Already there are 28 cases on the calendar. This, in most instances, will work great hardship. In one case an old gentleman sued for 60 days' wages at $4 per day, in all $240. The amount being over $100 the matter could not be settled in the small debts courts, and so the case pends.

Oregon's Medicine Industry. Dr. J. A. Lamberson has during the past few months bought for shipment near Lebanon, 340 tons of cascara bark. for which he has paid $60 a ton, or a total of $24,000. He has also bought 20 tons of Oregon grape root, paying therefor $1,200. The doctor is also investigating the market for fir balsam, having bought 66 barrels of that article paying $1,250 per barrel. Dr. Lamberson, who resides at Starbuck, Wash., states that he is now convinced that the collection of medicine barks, stc., will prove a permanent industry in that section of Oregon.

Wives of the Waltz King. Johann Strauss, the waltz king, was scarcely laid away to rest in the Friedhof when a series of disputes arose over his possessions. Strauss secured to his wife and stepdaughter, as well as his sisters, moderate incomes for life, and then made the Society of Friends of Music his heir-at-law. He disinherited his brother, the wellknown Eduard Strauss, and made no provision for the destitute widow of his brother Joseph. The chief effort to dispute the legality of Strauss' will is to be made by his second wife, from whom he claimed that he was divorced.

When Strauss contracted his second marriage both he and his wife were Roman Catholics, and were united in a Eastern Oregon, 8@13c; mohair, 27@ Catholic church and with the rites of vigorous as ever, although it is not now on any one day last year was 71,871, cago has been more than doubled in that religion. Johann Strauss receded from Roman Catholicism and became a Protestant, then emigrated to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, resided there for a period, obtained an absolute divorce from his wife and married a third time. This evasion of the Austrian marriage laws deprived Strauss of the court favor which he had enjoyed, and it seems certain that in the strict legal sense his second wife is his rightful widow, whereas his third wife, for whom he has provided, had no authentic claim on him. The Austrian laws of succession provide that a wife can never be disinherited, but has always a claim on at least one-third of the property left by her husband, so that the second wife of the great musician has every prospect of obtaining this share of his wealth. At present she is in poor circumstances, and earns her living in a photographic studio in Berlin.

Record. The Wind Made Snowballs. Last March there was a remarkable exhibition at Grafton, N. H., of the comparatively rare phenomenon of "snow rollers." Freshly fallen snow was rolled by the wind into innumerable cylinders, some of them as large as a barrel, which dotted the hills and fields. Similar rollers have been seen in recent years in Connecticut, in Kansas and in the State of Washington. The size varies with the strength of the wind.

Mr. G. H. Snyder, a well known citizen of Lawrence, Kan., said:

"I am now seventy years of age, About three years ago I experienced a coldness or numbness in the feet, then creeping up my logs, until it reached my body. I grew very thin in flesh, appetite poor and I did not relish my food. At last I became unable to move about. I consuited several distinguished physicians, one telling me I had locometor staxis, another that I had creeping paralysis. I took their medicines but continued to grow worse. Almost a paralysis. Itook their medicines but continued to grow worse. Almost a year ago a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Before I had finished my first box I found they were benefiting me. I used twelve boxes in all, and was perfectly cured. Although it is six months' since I used my last pill there has been no recurrence of the disease."—From Lawrence Journal.

A Fable in Stocks.

Once upon a time an operator in stocks was sold short, and ruin stared him in the face unless the market should break. In his desperation he remembered having heard that honesty is the best policy. He tried to dismiss the foolish thought, but .in vain. Finally, like the drowning man catching at the straw, he resolved to try being honest. The very next day he put utes when 17 of the leading bulls fell dead, they were so surprised at him. Hereupon the market naturally broke, and the operator could get all the stocks he wanted at his own figure. It is claimed that some, if not all, of these bulls had taken radishes and ham for breakfast, but that, it is submitted, does not destroy the moral of this fable. -Detroit Journal.
